The Heart of the Storm

Hurricane Maria crushed across Puerto Rico with cruel completeness. In deafening waves, it roared through the night. With shaking hands, flooded families were clutching their way to rooflines. Feeling their way in the dark. Linking arms to form desperate human chains. Holding themselves and their loved ones against the unspeakable, howling force.

Heart of the Storm begins with utter physical devastation, the total loss of every single basic comfort: home, shelter, security, electricity, food, safe water. From this moment of nothing, there comes a slow change that reveals what we really need, our most prized possessions: each other, our own humanity, the connections we create, and our shared hearts.
